Promoting Active Lifestyle – What Does it Mean to You and Me?

By Dr. Myung-Ah Lee, Professor
Department of Kinesiology, Recreation, and Sport

Dr. Myung-Ah Lee has been the Coordinator of the PE Teacher Education Program of the Department of Kinesiology, Recreation, and Sport. She received her doctorate from the Ohio State University in the area of Sport Pedagogy and joined as a faculty at Indiana State University in 2004. Her professional interest includes teacher education and instructional effectiveness in the area of sports education. On the other hand, she is a certified Tai Chi instructor and has been teaching Tai Chi classes at ISU and the community. In addition, she loves playing badminton and actively involves students, faculty, and staff on campus.

The Power of Words

By Dianne Frances Powell, Associate Director
University Communication

Ms. Powell is an accomplished communication leader. She has presented at regional/national social media and communications conferences, and recently published a peer-reviewed journal article on social media strategy. Her professional leadership and volunteerism were recognized in 2022 when she was named a 12 Under 40 honoree by the Terre Haute Chamber of Commerce and the Tribune-Star. She is a former Tribune-Star reporter. In 2016, she was recognized by the Hoosier State Press Association for her coverage of a chemical leak that displaced hundreds of families attending a local event. Powell earned a master's degree in Communication and Development from Ohio University and a Digital Marketing Certificate from Cornell University.
